Results from matrix algebra and analysis are used to minimize local and global $L_2$ criteria of kernel estimates of multivariate distribution functions. Under different matrix structures, optimal bandwidth matrices are derived and their selectors are shown to possess fast rates of convergence.